Steve:

I have reviewed your letter of September 22, as I said I would. I believe the portions of the letter that summarize our discussions during the depositions that day are reasonably accurate, with two obvious exceptions.

First, as to Item 4: I said that Unisys would produce an updated version of the 3D-VE "Delivery Excellence" report (the version produced in August was marked as Exhibit 250) that would now include identification of all 3D-VE "New Order" Engagements, with the exceptions to which you refer in your letter. (The secure commerce entities we discussed are not "shipping companies," but you have the gist of what I said on this topic.) As with the August version, the new version of the report will be sorted according to the "Engagements-New Order" category. I also said that Unisys would provide a list of the customer names in the other "Type" categories (without the other potentially client-sensitive information provided on the report) and you agreed this would be a satisfactory way of identifying "prospects." I am working on both of those items now.

Second, as to Item 5: You have accurately described our discussion except for the reference to "customers with a substantial presence in the United States." We will continue to identify U.S. customers according to how they are listed on the "Delivery Excellence" report; I did not and do not agree to review the documents to make a judgment about whether some non-U.S. customer may have what you regard as a "substantial presence" here.

William
